

Collaboration and Innovation in Prostate Cancer Research awarded with $5 Million in Movember Team Grants

Toronto, ON – June 11, 2013 – Prostate Cancer Canada (PCC) is proud to announce the recipients of the inaugural Movember Team Grants. The program promotes collaboration between not only researchers but also institutions, providing a united approach to prostate cancer research. The recipient group will receive $5 million in funding.

The 2013 Movember Team Grant has been awarded to Dr. Ralph Buttyan of the Vancouver Prostate Centre (Principal Investigator), who leads a team of 22 Co-Investigators. The title of their research is Tumour Cell Plasticity in Treatment-Resistant Prostate Cancer and their study will focus on targeting aggressive and lethal cancer.

"The $5 million Movember Team Grant funding is a robust addition to the $7.9 million dollars that has been committed to funding researchers in BC since 2007," says Rocco Rossi, President and CEO at PCC. "These Canadian researchers are recognized as international leaders in the field of prostate cancer research – we're proud to fund such an accomplished group."

Prostate Cancer Canada firmly believes that by having experts from different disciplines working together, we will continue to make advancements in all facets of the cancer spectrum such as treatment, diagnosis and survivorship. This team approach allows researchers to tackle issues from all angles and propose innovative solutions while also providing a training environment for investigators starting their research career.

"It's collaboration that helped Mo Bros and Mo Sistas raise over $42 million in 2012 and it's only by working together that we truly will have an everlasting impact on the face of men's health," commented Pete Bombaci, National Director, Movember Canada. "Knowing that the teamwork of the Mo community is helping to facilitate that of the research community is truly inspiring and we look forward to working together towards men's health outcomes for Canada and the world."

The Movember Team Grants Program is the largest open research competition in PCC's history. Representing collaboration, one of PCC's key program pillars, the initiative is one of the new research programs launched under PCC's Research Strategic Plan.
