20 Years of Health Reforms in Canada: The Experience of Seven Provinces

Over the last 25 years there has been in many cases a failure to adapt to emerging health needs and priorities within health systems in Canada. This provides a strong policy rationale to search for alternative strategies that might produce much-needed reforms.

This annual lecture will explore the transformative capacity of provincial health systems focusing on three questions:

- Where have provincial governments invested their reform efforts in the last 20 years?
- What strategies have they employed?
- What lessons can reformers draw from these experiences?

Speaker Jean-Louis Denis

Jean-Louis Denis is a Professor of Health Policy and Management at the School of Public Health, Université de Montréal, senior scientist on health system and innovation at the Research Center of the CHUM (CRCHUM) and holds the Canada Research Chair (Tier I) on health system design and adaptation. His current research looks at transformative capacities of health systems, the role of the medical profession in health policy and reforms and at the innovation-knowledge nexus in academic health science centers.
